The 1996 InANE Conference will be held in the USA in the city of Honolulu, on the island of Oahu, in the state of Hawaii. One of the six major Hawaiian islands, the small island of Oahu is known to the Hawaiians as "The Gathering Place" and is the most populated—about one million people.

Hawaii is sometimes called the "hub of the Pacific rim"—an area that is both economically and culturally diverse and of growing importance to the western world. We believe it is the perfect setting in which to examine the future importance of this part of the world in global publishing.

Honolulu and its world famous Waikiki Beach have been described by some as being like an Asian-Pacific Manhattan with great weather and a nice beach. Waikiki, with its spectacular ocean vistas, many great hotels, and good restaurants, has also been called the world's largest indoor-outdoor shopping mall. The multitude of shops and restaurants are all within easy walking distance of the venue for the 1996 InANE meeting—The Sheraton Waikiki.

Good public transportation services are available from HNL (Honolulu International Airport) to Waikiki so a rental car is not required—and in our opinion not desired, because parking can be hard to find and expensive in Waikiki. Should you opt to do some touring after the meetings, a large variety of vehicles are readily available from many rent-a-car offices in Waikiki. Also, many guided tours can be taken which originate by bus from the portico of the Sheraton Waikiki.

For those of you who have never been to Hawaii before and have to travel a very long distance to get there we recommend taking enough time to visit one of the neighboring islands such as Hawaii, Maui, or Kauai. They can be reached by air quickly and offer a significantly different perspective of Hawaii from that of Waikiki. Neighboring island trips can be booked from agents in the Sheraton after you have arrived in Honolulu.
